Course Objectives/ Overview

This course is designed for students at the advanced level who are able to read academic/formal texts without much difficulty by looking up some new words occasionally. The aim of this course is to help students develop language and socio-cultural knowledge through intensive listening and reading. Basic training will also be provided for discussing issues both orally and in writing. The topics for this course are mainly on academic domains. Students are also expected to improve their ability to manage their own study and life.

Specifically, by the end of the course, students are expected to be able to

- 1) increase vocabulary and socio-cultural knowledge to understand common academic prose and speech in domains such as humanities, social sciences and environmental sciences, without much difficulty,
- 2) use various styles of Japanese such as formal/polite/casual speech or writing depending on the situation and purpose,
- 3) master the manner of creating new knowledge from collaboration,multi-angle perspectives and critical thinking through discussion,presentation and essay writing,
- 4) expand the intellectual network and acquire knowledge for exploring issues based on a suitable academic framework in humanities, social sciences or natural sciences, and
- 5) manage their own study and everyday life independently by using the Japanese language.

Method of Evaluation

The performance on following items will be taken into account for the course grade:

- 1) Participation in discussion and other class activities: 10%
- 2) Preparatory worksheets (homework on comprehension, sentence creation etc.): 5%
- 3) Essay on the reading/listening materials: 5%
- 4) Three vocabulary quizzes: 5%
- 5) Final exam on reading/listening comprehension: 35%
- 6) Final academic essay on one's own topic: 20%
- 7) Final academic presentation on one's own topic: 10%
- 8) Portfolio (on one's own extensive learning) 10%

The percentage for each item may vary within 5 percent depending on the reliability of the items.

The four skills of listening, reading, speaking and writing will be assessed in approximately equal proportions.

Specific details of the assessment process and schedule will be presented at the first class meeting.

Critical Thought

Course Overview

The aim of this course is to introduce PEAK students to academic life at the University of Tokyo. It presents a variety of relevant skills and Objectives/ methods including library usage, research skills, academic honesty, critical thinking and some of the fundamental principles of the natural sciences and the social sciences and humanities.

In the last part of the (term length) course, we combine several of the above skills and methods, viz. critical thinking, intellectual honesty, academic writing and textual interpretation and analysis. To this end, we study several primary texts that have been chosen because they (arguably) have a relevance beyond the confines of culture and academic discipline. While the focus is on critical reading, there is an equal emphasis on expressing one's ideas orally in class discussion and debate, as well as in formal academic writing towards the end of

Teaching Methods The course will make use of a variety of teaching methods including lecturing, presentations, small and large group discussion and peer

Method of Evaluation

The method of evaluation is by continuous assessment (hence, there is no final exam). A final grade will be given based on:

- 1. student presentation (individually or in groups, depending on student enrolment) = 30%; 2. seminar participation = 30%;
- 3. end of semester written assignment of a short response paper = 40%.

Subtitle History of Modern Japan

Course Objectives/ Overview

This course is designed to introduce students to the history of Japan from the Tokugawa period until the end of the twentieth century. As a survey course, the content will focus on major historical events such as the Meiji Restoration, the colonization of Korea, the rise of fascism, the fifteen-year war, the postwar economic recovery, and the bursting of the bubble in the 1990s. The use of translated primary sources and films will be used to supplement the readings.

The objective is to offer students a traditional historiography of Japan and to introduce them to prominent historical figures through readings of primary sources. Thus the structure of the course will follow the familiar narrative of western modernization, militarization and the postwar economic miracle so that students will have a strong foundation on which to later form a critique of this history in their senior courses.

Introductory Chemistry (PEAK)

Subtitle An introduction to the key physical principles underpinning the whole of modern chemistry, focusing on key ideas from quantum mechanics, molecular statistics and thermodynamics.

Course Objectives/ Overview This course aims to provide a comprehensive introduction to the key ideas in Physical Chemistry with a focus on Quantum Mechanics and Thermodynamics.

By the end of the course, students should be able to

- 1) Understand the failure of classical mechanics.
- 2) Explain the key principles of quantum mechanics.
- 3) Rationalize the structure of atoms based on quantum mechanics.
- 4) Explain why the periodic table has the form that it has.
- 5) Describe the models of chemical bonding and use these models to predict the shapes and stabilities of molecules.
- 6) Understand the structure of gases including the effects of intermolecular forces.
- 7) Make calculations based on the kinetic theory of gases
- 8) Understand the relationship between the properties of individual molecules and of bulk samples.
- 9) Appreciate the significance of the Boltzmann distribution
- 10) Understanding key ideas in thermodynamic including work, heat, enthalpy, entropy and Gibbs energy.
- 11) Applying the basic concepts of thermodynamics to chemical equilibria

Teaching The primary means of instruction will be in a "flipped classroom" style. Each week a complete lecture will be available online Methods through ITC-LMS, that students must watch before attending the lecture session.

Time in class will be spent primarily on interactive problem solving, group discussion and electronic quizzes. Each lecture session will be accompanied by additional online materials to aid self test of the material covered.

Method of The course will be evaluated based on in class participation and a final examination. Evaluation

Required Will specify at class time. Textbook

Course Objectives/ This course is designed for L1-L2 students. In this course, students will acquire communicative skills for daily life situations using basic Japanese.

Overview

Specifically, by the end of the course, students are expected to be able to

- 1) communicate in a simple and direct exchange of information on social familiar matters
- 2) gain accuracy, fluency and natural pronunciation
- 3) put their knowledge of grammar and vocabulary acquired into use .
- 4) enjoy communication independently by using Japanese language and
- 5) develop self-monitoring and autonomous learning abilities.

Subtitle Applied Japanese (2): Tutorial (L1-L2)

Course Objectives/ Overview This course is designed for students at the elementary level. In this course, students will proceed with their learning individually and autonomously using various resources with peer and instructor's advice. General simultaneous group teaching will not be conducted for most of the course since the objectives and content of learning will vary by student. Students are expected to be positively and autonomously engaged in their own learning, bearing in mind that those who learn are students themselves.

Specifically, by the end of the course, students are expected to be able to

- 1) establish their own learning goals and objectives by understanding their own situation, identifying their own problems and needs, and considering what kind of Japanese language use are necessary for them.
- 2) understand their own suitable learning style by thinking and trying different learning methods upon their needs.
- 3) master the ability to manage their own learning.
- 4) improve their Japanese by concentrating on their weak or favorite area of learning.

Method of Evaluation The performance on following items will be taken into account for the course grade:

- 1) Participation in class activities
 - 2) Assessment of portfolio
 - 3) Assessment of the student's self-assessment

The items, methods, proportion of evaluation will be decided at the beginning of the course by the conference session with the instructor.

Course Objectives/ Overview This course is designed for the students who have almost completed the first half of elementary-level of Japanese language study. This course aims to help students find pleasure in their reading. Through graded readers, animation, poems and pop song lyrics, students will gain knowledge not only of new vocabulary and grammar but also of Japanese culture and society.

The objectives of this course are:

- 1) to enjoy reading Japanese and engage in independent reading,
- 2) to expand knowledge of Japanese culture and society,
- 3) to increase lexical and grammatical knowledge,
- 4) experience the rhythm of Japanese language by listening to readings and by reading aloud themselves,
- 5) to become able to discuss the readings.

Course Objectives/ This course is designed for L3 and L2 students. Classes will be conducted in Japanese.

Objectives/ Overview

The aim of this course is to help students increase what they do in real-life communicative situations and develop the attitude to deal with real Japanese

Specifically, by the end of the course, students are expected to be able to

- 1) understand the main points of clear standard input on familiar matters regularly encountered in school,
- 2) produce simple connected text on topic which are familiar or of personal interest,
- 3) describe experiences and events, dreams and ambitions and
- 4) briefly give reasons and explanations for opinions and plans.

Subtitle Grammar & Conversation (Intensive Japanese IV) (L2)

Course Objectives/ Overview This course is designed for students who have already acquired very basic communication skills. The aim of this course is to help students gain further basic knowledge of Japanese through aural-oral practice necessary for day-to-day communication tasks. Classes will be conducted in Japanese to the greatest extent possible.

Students should expect to become familiar with Japanese culture and society and improve their ability to manage their own study and life in Japan.

Specifically, by the end of the course, students are expected to be able to:

- 1) communicate in their daily life using basic vocabulary and sentence patterns
- 2) understand simple texts and information of the university and community
- 3) express their own ideas and opinions effectively using simple expressions
- 4) read short texts which consist of high-frequency words and basic sentence patterns

Course Objectives/ Overview L3/L4 courses are designed for students at intermediate level of Japanese. This course provides opportunities to improve listening and conversation skills as intermediate speakers, and also introduces exercises for Email writing. During classes, a variety of communicative tasks (in real-world situations) are given. Students will be able to speak more confidently, accurately, and fluently by developing a larger vocabulary and expressions in both personal and social situations in a rehearsed and spontaneous context.

Specifically, by the end of the course, students are expected to be able to $% \left\{ 1,2,\ldots ,n\right\}$

- 1) express personal meaning by combining and recombining learned material.
- 2) understand information conveyed in simple, sentence-length speech on familiar topics.
- 3) function reactively through an interaction between speaker and listener, by searching for appropriate linguistics forms and vocabulary.
- 4) express about topics related to interests and daily activities with manipulating time and aspect, consisting of sentences and strings of sentences.
- 5) express their ideas and opinions through presentations and discussions.

Applied Japanese (12): English-Japanese Interpreting Skills (J6-JS)

Course Objectives/ Overview

The goal of this course is to train effective and well-rounded communicators in both English and Japanese, through proven techniques used in the realm of profession conference interpretation, augmented by unique and practical exercises designed by the instructor specifically for PEAK and USTEP / KOMSTEP students, whose career goals generally are NOT directed towards conference interpretation.

Students will not only learn specialized skills of professional interpreting such as shadowing, sight translation, consecutive and simultaneous interpreting, but also engage in hands-on exercises such as

- 1) Rendering timely and concise summaries of news and editorials in Japanese
- 2) Performing recitations of Japanese literary works to enhance public speaking skills
- 3) Write self-reflections in Japanese bout their own strengths in weaknesses as a bilingual communicator.

Topics to be covered in each class will be cross-disciplinary and highly relevant to today's world. The instructor is ever mindful of students' academic interests and career goals, and will adjust the course plan accordingly.

The instructor has over 20 years of experience as an independent conference interpreter, working with government, Fortune 500 companies, international law firms, UN agencies and non-governmental organizations. Her International experience consists of growing up in 5 countries in 3 continents + Japan, as well as two stints in the U.S. as a graduate student.

The course is intended to be highly interactive, hence would be kept small. Please also see Notes on Registration.

Course Objectives/ Overview

This course is designed for students whose Japanese language level is from the second half of elementary-level to advanced. The aim of this course is to help students to acquire ability to learn Japanese autonomously plan their own learning, accomplish the plan and assess their learning. Group teaching will not be conducted in most of the classes since the objectives and content of learning will vary from student to student.

After identifying their own problems or needs in Japanese language learning, students will set their own goal of the course through negotiation with the instructor and decide the suitable way to achieve it. They should engage in their own learning individually in the class with advice from the instructor.

Specifically, by the end of the course, students are expected to be able to:

- 1) establish their learning goals with assistance from their teacher and peers
- 2) make study plans on their own
- 3) conduct their studies by utilizing various resources and materials effectively
- 4) monitor and manage their own learning
- 5) assess their own learning through feedback and reflection.

Method of Evaluation The performance on following items will be considered for the course grade:

- 1) Participation
 - 2) Assignments
 - 3) Achievement of student's study
 - 4) Student's self-evaluation

Further details will be provided on the first day of the class.

Subtitle Introduction to Political Theory II

Course Objectives/ Overview Thought is the means by which we elaborate who we are, assert our membership of a culture, authorise institutions within society, make claims upon each other and encounter difference in a global world. It stands to reason that without philosophical reflection upon the core concepts at the heart of the social sciences and humanities, life today would have neither rationale nor articulated meaning. It is thus precisely for these reasons that IPTII introduces students to some of the core concepts that they encounter and deploy in their undergraduate studies.

Subtitle How Languages are Learned

Course Objectives/ Overview This course will survey how humans acquire languages. It will start off by reviewing relevant literature on how children develop their ability to use their native or first language (first language acquisition) and how some children learn to speak multiple languages simultaneously (childhood bilingualism). With a solid understanding of the process of first language acquisition, we then move on to discuss how humans acquire additional languages (second language acquisition, SLA), what influences the learning speed and the ultimate attainment of the second language, and what promotes or impedes SLA in the classroom setting. These issues will be tackled from a variety of standpoints, including socio-cultural, cognitive, and interactional perspectives. This course offers students an opportunity to learn about the mechanisms of language acquisition, to reflect on their own experiences of language learning, and perhaps even to apply theories of SLA to their own language learning endeavors.

Method of Assignments will be comprised of: (a) active participation in class activities, (b) reading questions/reflections posting, and (c) an article

Subtitle Tokugawa Cities

Course Objectives/ Overview This course will explore the three most important cities of Tokugawa Japan: Edo, Kyoto and Osaka. These three cities were among the largest of the early modern world and were home to a vibrant urban culture. Edo, the shogun's capital, was nothing but a small fishing village in the early 1600s but, within a century, grew to probably the largest city in the world with over a million people. Kyoto was the imperial capital, famous for its temples and the arts. Osaka was a merchant's city, full of economic activity dominated by the growth of a money economy. While roaming the streets of these three cities, students will be asked to think about how people lived, worked and played. What did they think about the city around them? Who performed the labour to build such cities? And, where did they go to have fun? In order to explore these questions in class the use of maps, primary sources, screen paintings, prints, films, and short stories will be utilized.

Subtitle Risk society and governance of uncertainty

Course Objectives/ Overview Who, in the risk society of the 21st century, decides what is and is not a risk? This course considers the need to re-examine governance frameworks for dealing with contemporary uncertainties in different policy domains. Focusing on environmental crises and risks of scientific-technological provenance, it addresses the growing importance of emergent institutions (known as 'boundary organisations' or 'science-policy interfaces') for local, regional and global governance of uncertainty. Through short interactive lectures, case studies, scenario analysis and role-play simulations, students will engage in a critical examination of the idea of a 'World Risk Society' (Ulrich Beck). In so doing, they will explore both: 1) the implications of an understanding of risks as social constructs (or products of struggles within the context of specific relations of definitional power) 2) the possibility for new institutional arrangements interfacing science and policy to become a political force.

Method of Evaluation Evaluation will be based on active participation to classroom discussions and learning activities (70%). Learning activities include individual or joint oral presentations as well as specific learning activities conducted on a collaborative basis (case studies, scenario analysis, and role-play simulations).

In addition, students will be asked to write occasional individual notes on issues discussed in the classroom (30%).

Subtitle Physical science: Application of physiological concepts for the promotion of fitness and wellness

Course Objectives/ Overview

This course is designed to provide a theoretical basis for understanding the physiological responses to exercise and the adaptations that occur during exercise. These lecture/discussion areas include the wellness concepts, nutrition, and support systems of the body (cardiovascular, respiratory, metabolic, musculoskeletal and nervous) function. Upon successful completion of this course, students understand the physiological adaptations that occur following exercise training, the benefits of exercise and the health risks associated with inactivity.

Subtitle Basic Energy Engineering

Course Objectives/ Overview Today's energy industry is dominated by fossil fuels (coal,oil and natural gas) and some nuclear power generation. However, the need for sustainable energy sources and also to reduce greenhouse gas emission will necessitate a move to renewable technologies in the future. The objective of this course is to understand different energy generating technologies such as fossil and nuclear power plants and also the emerging renewable sources such as solar and wind energy.

We will cover the fundamental thermodynamic foundations of energy conversion, the operation of solar cells and associated semiconductor physics, photosynthesis and biomass/biofuels as means of energy conversion, and finally, wind power generation.

Some examples of current and future energy projects around the world will also be covered.

An introduction to the key physical principles underpinning the whole of modern chemistry, focusing on key ideas from quantum mechanics, Subtitle molecular statistics and thermodynamics.

Course Objectives/ Overview

This course aims to provide a comprehensive introduction to the key ideas in Physical Chemistry with a focus on Quantum Mechanics and Thermodynamics.

By the end of the course, students should be able to

- 1) Understand the failure of classical mechanics
- 2) Explain the key principles of quantum mechanics.
- 3) Rationalize the structure of atoms based on quantum mechanics.
- 4) Explain why the periodic table has the form that it has.
- 5) Describe the models of chemical bonding and use these models to predict the shapes and stabilities of molecules.
- 6) Understand the structure of gases including the effects of intermolecular forces.
- 7) Make calculations based on the kinetic theory of gases
- 8) Understand the relationship between the properties of individual molecules and of bulk samples.
- 9) Appreciate the significance of the Boltzmann distribution
- 10) Understanding key ideas in thermodynamic including work, heat, enthalpy, entropy and Gibbs energy.
- 11) Applying the basic concepts of thermodynamics to chemical equilibria

Course Overview

This is an advanced writing course focusing particularly on journalistic writing. Taking a hands on approach, students will publish their work on Objectives/ the Komaba Times website throughout the semester and a newsletter will be printed and distributed at the end of the year. Students interested in journalism or any kind of job involving public communication will find this course beneficial.

In this course, we will explore

- 1) the different writing styles between academic and journalistic writing
- 2) the different types of journalistic writing such as incident reports, feature articles, investigative writing, editorials, interviews and reviews.
- 3) how to write concisely, clearly, and ethically
- 4) how to incorporate supporting evidence in the argument
- 5) how to talk about one's writing process
- 6) how to discuss and review a friend's writing
